MDOT doing bridge work after concrete chunks fall from Bangor overpass, damage vehicles

“Two vehicles wound up with tire damage and a third had a damaged rim after they struck chunks of concrete that had fallen from the Access Road to the former Air Force ammunition dump. It is the first overpass south of Exit 182 for Interstate 395, according to the state transportation department.”

Please read this article and as you're shaking your head in amazement “remember the $61 million that this same agency wants to waste away on the deficient 2B-2 alternative and if that doesn't make you go hmmm, how about the fact that 33% of our state's bridges are either structurally deficient or functionally obsolete.

I don't need to comment any further “I think the falling concrete speaks for itself...
